Kenneth E. Carfine
Fiscal Assistant Secretary
Department of Treasury
Room 2112
1500 Pennsylvania Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20220

Dear Assistant Secretary Carfine,

America's dismal savings rate has profound national and personal implications. This is especially true for lower-income families who lack savings to protect them in case of health problems or job loss, or to help them purchase a home or finance a child's education. However, a recent grassroots test has demonstrated U.S. Savings Bonds can encourage saving by these often first time, small balance savers.

The Savings Bond Working Group invites you to meet with its representatives on September 10, 2008 at 2 PM at the Hyatt Regency, Crystal City (Potomac Room) to discuss the results of a savings bond pilot test conducted this year at thirty-two VITA sites across the country. Through this project, 1,086 tax filers purchased $202,550 in savings bonds. Among many provocative findings, the demonstration revealed that bonds appeal to first-time savers who would not otherwise save part of their refunds. Indeed, more than a third of bond buyers reported that their purchase was the first time they saved part of their refund. Almost two thirds of purchasers reported they had no money saved before buying a bond.

The Savings Bond Working Group (SBWG) is a coalition of national and local organizations who share a belief that savings bonds have a unique and profound role to play in helping working Americans save for their own futures, and that of their children.

Your office received a copy of an evaluation of the 2008 pilot test. We would like the opportunity to discuss this study with you and steps that the Department of Treasury can take to increase savings bonds' availability for families that find it so challenging to save.

We look forward to hearing from you in order to plan a useful and informative session. Please have your office direct communications to Jeff Zinsmeyer at Doorways to Dreams (D2D) Fund (jjzinsmeyer@d2dfund.org) / 617 541 9065.

Yours truly,
